Special Presentation

A. Food Pantry Research Update
Representatives from Center for Service Learning and Academic Internships will update the AS Council on research they have collected on student hunger and recommendations on potential resources that could be provided.

Jimmy Barnett, a Service Learning Intern from Center for Service Learning and Academic Internships, was present. Barnett explained that the Service Learning Interns have finished their research on student hunger. With the assistance of the Office for Institutional Research, a survey was put out to the student population regarding Food Insecurity. The survey had an 8% response rate from the campus community. Four findings were found from the research collected: Food insecurity is found largely in the junior and senior student level, 50% of students with food insecurity were first-time college students; 48% of students with food insecurity were Pell grant recipients and a large potential volunteer pool is available to support community food access. To combat food insecurity two programs have already been created: an emergency meal card system, which will create 40 cards with $25 worth of "J" points allocated to each card available in select offices on campus and an HSU Student Food Security Resource Guide which includes 14 Food for People pantries available to students and lists other resources available. Barnett stated that through research, it is not recommended that a campus food pantry be established, but that a collaborative partnership between HSU and Food for People be maintained and information about Food Pantry Resources be made more available to students.

Anne Holcomb, the Executive Director, and Jason Hervin, the Food Pantry Coordinator, were also present to provide additional information. Holcomb stated that Food for People has been serving the community since 1979 and serves approximately 12,000 individuals monthly. Last year 1/3 of the food distributed were fresh fruits and vegetables and Food for People offers once-a-month food boxes to individuals. Food for People works in partnership and collaborates with other organizations that also work on local food security issues through the Food Resources Collaborative, a partnership of non-profit groups that assist with distributing food efficiently.

Hervin stated that Campbell Creek Connexion, a church adjacent to the southern boundary of the HSU Campus provides food services from 10 a.m. – 12 p.m. on Saturdays and provides USDA commodities, local foods and items purchased with donated funds. Most of the food pantries use the "choice model" which creates a shopping experience, rather than providing the recipient with pre chosen food.

Yzaguirre stated that he was interested in seeking ways that the campus could provide unsold food from dining services to alleviate food insecurity needs. Hervin stated that Food for People has received donations from dining services in the past and encouraged Yzaguirre to also seek ways that food could be distributed directly to students without an intermediary. Carney asked if it was possible for food pantry services to be provided during evening hours. Hervin stated that Food for People is open to the opportunity. Dilley inquired about ways to break the stigma for people who may be in need, but do not want to access services. Hervin stated that many of the volunteers at the food pantries are also recipients and that education and the development of resources materials can aid against the stigma of using pantry services. Mira Friedman, HSU's Health Educator, asked Hervin and Holcomb if they agreed with the findings of the report that HSU should not open its own food pantry at this time. Holcomb stated that a food pantry requires volunteer coordination and a large refrigeration system and encouraged students to utilize preexisting services.

Tyson stated that in the past the Associated Students has entered into a one year MOU with the California State Student Association, but CSSA is now requesting to replace the one year MOU with a three year MOU. Hoskins stated that CSSA has requested the three year MOU as part of a strategic plan that was approved by the board in February, 2013 and that CSSA would like to stabilize their funding. Hoskins explained that in the past larger CSU's have withheld funding due to action taken by the CSSA Board of Directors and that CSSA receives funding from each member campus. Hoskins stated that he has previously voiced opposition on the three year MOU because the CSSA Board of Directors could raise the dues rate on member campuses in the middle of the three year term and that the process for a campus to be released from the MOU commitment can take up to ten months. Henderson also stated that she had concerns with the amount of time that the withdrawal process would take. Yzaguirre stated that he was not in favor of the three year MOU and stated that CSSA should seek to maintain their membership by achieving results on behalf of the member organization. Reynolds yielded to Jerry Dinzes, a member of the 2013-14 AS Council; Dinzes stated that he was not in favor of a three year MOU. Lapiz stated his support for the three year MOU.
